

The previous exemption for "established business relationships" is the correct action. Just by nature of having an established business relationship makes it an expected avenue of communication. A business customer would naturally want to be notified of a cost savings promotion, so there is no basis to incur additional costs on the part of the seller just to provide a benefit to the buyer.